Historical Note
In 1919, Penn Run Coal Company's Victor No. 45 Mine and the Russell Coal Company's Victor No. 29 Mine were opened near Clymer, in Indiana County, Pennsylvania. They were owned by Richard Peale, of St. Benedict, Cambria County, Pennsylvania, who owned the mines' parent company Peale, Peacock, and Kerr Corporation. A.C. Hoknke was the superintendent of Victor No. 45 and Russell Coal Company's Victor No. 29. The mines all used the New York Central Railroad for haulage. Although the men who worked at the Victor mines did not live in Company built towns, Peale did own and operate a company store in Clymer.

In 1919, there were 4 Victor mines operating under the numbers 24, 25, 27, and 29. That year, the mines together had 430 employees and produced 335,470 tons of coal, which was comparable to other mines in Indiana County.

The Penn Run Coal Corporation opened Victor #45 in 1924; it was also owned by Richard Peale. All of these mines had as their parent company the Peale, Peacock and Kerr Corporation, which owned significant coal lands in Cambria County, primarily in the area around Patton, Pennsylvania. In 1927, Victor #45 had 139 employees and shipped 68,228 tons of coal over the N.Y.C. R.R.

Both the Russell Coal Company mines and the Penn Run mines were abandoned and dismantled by the end of 1938, with all four mines working less than 38 days a year. (As opposed to larger local mines averaging 130 days a year for the same time period.)

The Penn Run - Russell Coal Collection is particularly relevant to the study of the mining industry due to the detailed information supplied on the documents. For each man employed, there are stated, among other data, his age, number of years, experience in the mines, origin of birth, number of dependents, the physical description, and the reasons for leaving his place of former employment. Thus, they are useful for researchers interested in immigration patterns, movement of mines within the area, and the study of family relationships during the 1930's.
